

VIEW ON YOUTUBE

The Ninth Annual
DAVID L. JANNETTA DISTINGUISHED LECTURE
in War, Literature & the Arts

Freebase Eagle wraps its homeshoe around an Iraqi family with their children and goats and chickens; they live in a small compound hidden by trees and an old derelict building. I spend ten minutes consulting one of the elderly women living there. With angry hand gestures she explains to me through the wire fence that an incoming mortar round means to kill guys like me has, in fact, strayed into her yard, nearly killing her and her grandchildren. And she's angry about the chickens.

—from My Life as a Foreign Country

BRIAN TURNER

SEPTEMBER 8, 2015 | 7:15 PM IN ARNOLD HALL